Welcome to Thermopolis

Dinosaurs, cowboys and mineral hot springs come together to create a trip of a lifetime in Thermopolis. New West meets Old West meets prehistoric in a community where you can relax in the world’s largest hot springs, dig for dinosaurs and spike your adrenaline whitewater rafting. You don’t even have to leave your car- the drive winding through Wind River Canyon is one of the most stunning in the state, with towering walls formed from ancient rock you travel through time. But you’d remiss if you didn’t stop- at least for a night or two. Hunt for petroglyphs, cast your fly rod and splash with the kids in the hot springs pools.

STAR PLUNGE & HELLIE’S TEPEE POOLS
Swimming in one hot spring isn’t enough to get the true Thermopolis experience, so indulge in a time-honored tradition of soaking in three iconic hot-spring fed facilities within the state park. It’s a rite of passage no visitor should miss. Accomplishing the hot spring trifecta earns you bragging rights and also three times the fun.

THE WYOMING DINOSAUR CENTER
Millions of years ago dinosaurs roamed the area that is now Thermopolis. The Wyoming Dinosaur Center is the closest you’ll come to see them walk again. Among the 30 mounted skeletons are “Jimbo,” a Supersaurus and one of the largest dinosaurs ever mounted and “Stan,” a 35-foot T-Rex. The 16,000-square-foot complex includes a world-class museum and actual dig sites where you can observe- and even participate in- the discovery of more the ancient creatures.

WHITETWATER RAFTING
Washakie Falls, Glassy Wave and Sphincter. These are just a few of the rapids that make up some of Wyoming’s best – and most challenging- whitewater. You will get wet on this ride. Between the rapids, don’t forget to look up. The trip takes you down one of the most scenic canyons in the world.

HOT SPRINGS STATE PARK
Thousands of gallons of hot mineral water flow over colorful terraces every day in Hot Springs State Park. You can view it from The Swinging Bridge, or immerse yourself in the free bath house where the water is a soothing 104 degrees.

It’s a relaxing way to end a day spent exploring the park’s petroglyph site, hiking and photographing the park’s vibrant flowering gardens or its bison herd.
The dinosaurs aren’t the only ones that left clues about the world thousands of years ago in the area now known as Thermopolis. Legend Rock Petroglyph site is one of the most impressive petroglyph areas in the world. The protected site features at least 283 different petroglyphs on 92 sandstone panels. Some of these ancient masterpieces date back 10,000 years.

Hot Springs County Historical Museum
Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid frequented the Hole-in-the-Wall Saloon and you can too at the Hot Springs County Historical Museum which features exhibits dedicated to some of Wyoming’s most famous outlaws. The museum also showcases what is believed to be the largest collection of Native American artifacts assembled by a single family in the United States.

Wind River Canyon
Rugged. Stunning. Majestic. It’s hard to describe Wind River Canyon, four miles south of Thermopolis in a single word. Crane your head up at the towering walls of ancient rock and scan the nearby river for rafters and wildlife on what is known as one of the prettiest drives in the state. If you are behind the wheel make sure to utilize the pull-outs, you don’t want to miss the scenery on this designated Wyoming Scenic byway.

Wyoming Whiskey
Few things go together better than cowboys and whiskey so it’s fitting that since 2009 Wyoming has had its own distillery in Kirby 12 miles north of Thermopolis. Tours of the state’s first legal distillery teach how handcrafted bourbon is made- Wyoming style- from milling locally-grown grains to fermentation to distilling to pouring a taste (for those who are of age).

Outdoor Art
You don’t have to go inside for a dose of culture. Stroll downtown Thermopolis and admire outdoor sculptures and statues created by Wyoming artists.
Prehistory

Millions of years ago dinosaurs walked the Earth. The proof is in the bones they’ve left behind. Fossil hunters first discovered dinosaur bones near Thermopolis in 1993 and have since established more than 80 dig sites in the area. But the history left in the hills didn’t end when the dinosaurs died. There’s petroglyphs carved into sandstone rocks from the prehistoric ancestors of the Shoshone Indians who have long called what is now Wyoming home.

Healing Waters

The healing waters of the area’s mineral springs attracted dinosaurs, prehistoric migratory people, Native American tribes, Western settlers and now travelers visiting and crossing Wyoming. Native Americans believed the water contained therapeutic power. In the early 19th century a sizeable medical community formed in Thermopolis centered around the hot springs and treating those visiting in hopes the water would restore their health. The Shoshone and Arapaho tribes gave Wyoming the hot springs in a treaty in 1896, with the provision it remain accessible to the general public without charge. You can still visit the bath house in Hot Spring State Park free of charge.

Geological Formations

The mineral rich hot water creates colorful geological formations over millions of years. In Hot Springs State Park you can see this in the beautiful Rainbow Terraces. Naturally colored and formed by mineral deposits from hot springs they look like small vibrant waterfalls and form a 125 degree lake.
THE TOWN OF THERMOPOLIS

Not surprisingly, the name Thermopolis comes from the Greek word for hot city. Founded in 1897, people reached the town by braving mountain passes in wagons until 1910 when the railroad reached the town. People came seeking the healing powers of the hot springs. The town also attracted outlaws like the Sundance Kid and Butch Cassidy. Today about 3,200 people call Thermopolis home and while people still come for the hot mineral water, the outlaws have been replaced by famous western hospitality.

ENERGY

It wouldn’t be Wyoming without energy development. Coal was the first mineral resource mined in the area in 1907. Oil was also discovered in the early 1900s. The Grass Creek Field is one of the largest oil fields in the state.

AGRICULTURE

Lucy Morrison, the “Sheep Queen,” was one of the first sheep ranchers in the area. By 1900 ranchers used ditches from Owl Creek to irrigate hay and alfalfa crops to feed livestock.

Despite their dedication, the high elevations and harsh land made farming difficult and it never became a significant industry in the area. You can, however, buy materials made from local wool in town.

1916 SWINGING BRIDGE

For the best view of the Rainbow Terraces, head to the Swinging Bridge. Originally built in 1916 to connect the Big Spring with the smaller Fremont Spring and a sanatorium, it was condemned in the 1980s and restored in the 1990s. The foot bridge provides a unique vantage point for viewing the Big Horn River and mineral terraces. In the summer it’s also a great spot for capturing the splash of color from the summer flower gardens with your camera.
What is your favorite dinosaur? It probably didn’t take you long to answer. There are few things more captivating to the imagination than dinosaurs and 150 million years ago Thermopolis was full of the creatures. Today you can learn about the land they called home and even help uncover the remains of those fossilized in the ground at area dig sites. You might just find a Diplodocus or Allosaurus.

The Wyoming Dinosaur Center
The Wyoming Dinosaur Center might be the closest thing to a real Jurassic Park. Walking through the doors transports you back in time where Tyrannosaurus Rex ruled the land with his flesh-tearing six-inch teeth- which you can see up close, along with the skeletons of more than 30 dinosaurs. Hundreds of dioramas bring the dinosaurs to life- be sure to check out the two Velociraptors hunting the horned dinosaur Protoceratops. Along with the impressive dino displays are fossils from the earliest life forms like fish from Scotland or flying reptiles from Brazil. The world-class museum will captivate and entertain kids and adults of all ages.

Dig Site Tours
The search for new dinosaur bones continues in Thermopolis and you can tour the actual dig sites. The tour offers a rare behind-the-scenes opportunity to see dinosaur bones in the ground and excavation in process. The Wyoming Dinosaur Center has removed more than 10,000 bones from these excavation sites. Think you have what it takes to be a paleontologist? The “Dig for a Day” program allows participants to get down in the dirt and help uncover the fossils.
About The Park
Come for the hot springs, but prepare to be enchanted by all that Hot Spring State Park has to offer. Hot water cascades down colorful terraces along the Big Horn River. Relax in the park’s free bath house where the 104 degree water soothes away aches and pains. Explore the 6.2 miles of accessible trails. Bring a picnic and your fishing pole. Hot Springs State Park is a full-service park open for day-use. There are boat docks and reserve-able picnic shelters within the park.

Bison Herd
You don’t have to go to Yellowstone to see bison. Wyoming’s state herd is located in Hot Springs State Park. The herd is located in two pastures allowing the massive animals to roam on the north and east sides of town. Public roads loop through the large pasture around Monument Hill so you can get an up-close view of the “monarchs of the plains” in a setting where you don’t have to fight for your viewing position. Just remember, bison are wild animals so make sure you stay in the car.

The Big Spring
At the center of all the activities in Hot Springs State Park is the Big Spring. The turquoise and green mineral laden spring issues 2.2 million gallons of water per day at a scorching 127 degrees. The water contains at least 27 different minerals and feeds all the attractions within the park.

Swinging Bridge
This suspension bridge offers a bit of a thrill as you walk above the Big Horn River, but even better is the view—especially of the Rainbow Terraces and the flowering gardens below.

Rainbow Terraces
Walk along a rainbow of vibrant natural colors when you follow a paved walkway beside the Rainbow Terraces, created from the minerals in the hot spring water, algae and plankton.

Swimming

Do not forget to pack your swim suit. Two privately owned facilities offer indoor and outdoor pools, water slides, hot tubs and steam rooms open 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. every day. Plus, there's the State Bath House. Not only is it open to the public, it's free! If you realize you did forget your suit, don't worry, you can rent swimsuits and towels at the public facilities.

Whitewater Rafting

Whitewater rafting tops the list of any adventure travel itinerary and the roaring rapids in Wind River Canyon won't disappoint. With class IV rapids and sometimes even class V, down the gorgeous Wind River Canyon this trip feeds your need for adrenaline and showcases the incredible beauty of the area. Between getting drenched through the rapids, be sure to check out the ancient canyon walls and scour the banks for wildlife.

Fishing

Cast your line for brown, rainbow and Snake River cutthroat trout, as well as mountain whitefish and stone catfish. There is public fishing access situated in and around Thermopolis. Test your skills and patience and you'll be rewarded. Guides are available in the area or you can set out solo. Either way you'll need a Wyoming fishing license.

Hunting

Elk, deer, pronghorn, moose, upland game birds and waterfowl— that's why hunters come from around the world to try their luck and nab their game in Thermopolis.

Water Sports & More

Boysen Reservoir appears like an oasis as you exit the beautiful Wind River Canyon 20 miles south of Thermopolis. This state park is the place to go in Wyoming for boating and water skiing. There's also some great fishing with hungry trout and walleye. If you prefer the land, there's hiking and ATV trails throughout the area.
Golfing

Thermopolis Golf Course boasts nine challenging holes nestled in the shadow of Thermopolis’ famous Roundtop Mountain. Try not to let the spectacular view of town and the region throw you off your game.

Sweet Spot Miniature Golf

An 18-hole golf course complete with waterfalls and ponds makes for a perfect family activity. Make everyone feel like a winner with a sweet treat after at Dairyland, situated on the same property.

The Ritz

Maybe the weather isn’t cooperating. Or maybe you need to sit still after a day of adventures. Or maybe you’ve heard about the famous popcorn. Whatever the reason, The Ritz Theatre, with its new digital system, is the place to go to take in a movie. Blow off steam in the game room and of course try Wyoming’s best popcorn.
Shopping

Shopping local isn’t a fad here; it’s a way of life. Our friends and neighbors own the grocery stores, art galleries and gift shops. Buy your vacation staples, but also take home one-of-a-kind items like yarn woven from wool from local sheep. Buy unusual gifts or grab souvenirs to help you remember your Thermopolis adventure.
